

Explaining the painting
“A small village (Rudesheim) on the River Rein, Germany.”

This is a painting made of two superimposed paintings. What you see is an artistic view of a small town in Germany, but each line of this village is controlled by a hidden drawing underneath that is barely obvious.